1. SUNG Shih-lun's command received orders from the Chinese Communist Government to select one or possibly two divisions from each army to undergo special training. On 2 March the selected divisions were transferred to Fenghuangch'eng (鳳凰城), on the Mukden-Antung railroad, where they received new Soviet equipment. All heavy weapons and tank personnel in these divisions are Japanese. Each unit above regimental level is assigned from three to eight Soviet advisers. The allotted time for re-equipping and for special training is set at 50 days. Upon completion of their training these troops will act as cadre for the International Volunteer Army.*
2. SUNG Shin-lun's command received an order from the Chinese Communist Government instructing commanders to allow Soviet officers to select a number of low-ranking officers above the level of squadron leader for special training. Upon completion of their training these men will voluntarily surrender to United Nations forces in order to conduct riots and assassinations within war prisoner camps.
3. On 13 March the situation in Mukden was very tense. On 9 March an arsenal on the east side of Mukden started to move to the Haolikang (130-17, 47-05) mine. On 7 March 16 anti-aircraft guns were placed near Mukden airfields.
